A young boy sits outside on a covered porch, absentmindedly playing with a small red ball. There is a steady rain. He keeps glancing to his left, down the street.	Our cancer care is so advanced it's offered by only a few cancer centers in the world. To some people, that's very important.
The rain stops. The ball (close-up) bounces, forgotten, down the front steps.	But to most of us, what's important is that more cancers can now be cured.
A man steps away from the passenger seat of a car that has pulled to the curb. The boy races down the stairs and across the lawn to his father's embrace.	That more people are sent home healthy.  And isn't that what really matters?

Note to voice talent:

Richlands is pronounced like it's two words: RICH lands, with emphasis on "rich." Do not say "Richlunds" or "Richlins." Feel free to call us at (276) 596-6006 if you'd like to hear it from a native!
